

The Power You Have

By Reese Kammerer

Try respecting the shunned

They discriminate just for fun

While it makes minorities get used to the guns

Destroying lives, is that fun?

Filled with lies, they want to run.

Many people die, this is not fun.

The danger is true and

It's nothing new and

The pain goes threw them

Cuz they don't see them as human

The suicide

Should make them feel new inside

Instead they can watch people die

Because of their own lie

Without feeling new inside.

All the problem of stereotypes

If often wrong but it's a serious fight

The longing followers feel nothing inside

When the light of the broken turns into the night

Acting like others of their own race are a parasite

With all these laws getting past

How long willllllllll it last stuck in the jaws of the past

None of us are some invasive species

Its a problem when the uneducated just believe these

Lies and deceit please

Teach your friends, the uneducated

I'm not talking to you adults

My peers have the power

People younger than me have the power

To save lives this hour

Either listen to me now, or

Continue to watch people suffer

Cuz the jokes and comments made by teens

Carves a path of dicrimination by any means

But you have the means to end the suffering

By standing up for ur brothers and

Sister with some simples words like

Stop or that's not right

I know its hard, but it's harder

To live thinking you don't belong here

So please save you brothers and sisters

From the mislead teenagers

Who don't know the pain they cause, be the life saver
